The Man of San Fernandez
By CLINTON ROSS
Copyright, 1905, by American Press Association
I QUITE appreciated Van Brule's embarrassment, for I knew Trilany and all the circumstances of that sorry episode which had thrown him out of the pale by which the conventional keeps itself aloof from the unconventional. What Trilany did, good and bad, was once in everybody's mouth, and in his case, he was not altogether quieted the scandal—scandal springing up to trouble a man when his deeds have put the cause of it far away from him.
But you who know the sort of chap Jim Trilany is and was—with his impetuosity and his faults and his charm of manner—you need not wonder him that day he did exactly what he did, impolitic as it was, for nobody in New York invited Jim Trilany there. He was as much forgotten as a man who is dead—socially, I mean—the scandal about him, as I say, never quite getting into oblivion, fools repeating it, and thoughtless people, who were perhaps not altogether fools, carrying it on whenever his name chanced to be mentioned.
Trilany, you know from what he did in Samoa, where he saved his ship, was not the man to "run into his hole" because of what was said about him.
The matter of Van Brule's embarrassment was that Mary Van Brule was giving a dinner to a woman who gives a dinner as successfully as Mrs. Van Brule is no second rate sort of genius. She knows where to place people, and her table rarely fails in the wits being pitted against the person of poor wit—quite cleverly, you know—so that the poor wit is never affronted, and in putting a pretty girl and a clever girl exactly with the right escorts, and the people who go together always together, and the people who go apart always apart—a table as nicely arranged, mind you, as a good chess player arranges his men after the first ten moves.
This particular dinner was one given to Lady and Sir Arthur Groffin, her majesty's consul to San Fernandez. Everybody knows, I dare say, about Mrs. Chatwind's marriage to Sir Arthur Groffin. Mrs. Chatwind met Sir Arthur in Cannes, I believe, and he was a man who had always been in the foreign office, never acquiring any great distinction, always for some little appointment that paid none too well and supporting the fine manner of the man of the world on a small enough income. When Mrs. Chatwind met Sir Arthur she was fifty and he something about sixty-five, but with an American failing for that sort of thing she had not lost her ambition and was glad to be Lady Groffin. Although she had a daughter, as everybody knows, who some years before—how many years must I remember? I am getting old myself—was the most attractive young woman at all the important occasions.
After she had married she followed Groffin to many places around the world, Eleanor Chatwind always in her train, a young woman who could say clever things and leave you wondering what she meant, who had a crowd of admirers, although she was now quite thirty, and who kept them all conjecturing who was preferred and who wasn't. She had been engaged once, and people hadn't forgotten that, because it was connected with what I am telling you about.
Well, two days before that dinner a man failed Mrs. Van Brule, and she called out her husband and told him to find somebody, and what did he do but meet at the club that very evening Trilany, and, forgetting all about Trilany's past and the scandal about him, what did he do but ask him to come around two days after, if in town, to a bit of a dinner his wife was giving. "You must, Jim—you must," he insisted.
Trilany, I think I have said, was a man who never ran away from a scandal; but, on the other hand, he was the last man in the world to go to a house, where that old matter might embarrass his hostess and his host. So I can't quite account for his accepting this invitation, save for the very persuasive force that Pierre Van Brule possessed and because particularly he always had a strong influence on Trilany. At any rate, he accepted.
When Van Brule told his wife she exclaimed in horror:
"Why, you know, the dinner is for the Chatwinds. Don't you remember?" Then Pierre did remember, and that was the cause of his embarrassment.
Without describing it myself, I think I may as well tell what happened when Trilany went into that house. Mrs. Merryweather, who remembers everything, remembered it.
"That man here?" she cried—in a whisper, of course—to Daisy Barton, who remarked that he was very handsome, and then said all at once, "Oh, do tell me when it is about!"
"Why, don't you know?" said that dear old gossip, who enjoys more meddling with other people's affairs than with her own. "He is Trilany—Lieutenant Trilany used to be—and he did some wonderfully fine things. I believe once. Saved a ship out in Samoa in that awful hurricane—you remember. Then about a year after he was acting captain somewhere on the Pacific sta-

Chicago Society Woman Who Was So Sick She Could Not Sleep or Eat, Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills.
When a woman's kidneys go wrong, her back gives out and every little task becomes a burden. She is tired, nervous, sleepless, run down—suffers daily from backache, headaches, dizzy spells, and bearing-down pains.
Don't worry over imagined "female troubles." Cure the kidneys and you will be well. Read how to find the cure.
Marion Knight, of 33 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill., member of the Chicago Federation of Musicians and a well-known club woman, says: "This winter when I started to use Doan's Kidney Pills I ached in every bone and had intense pains in the kidneys and pelvic organs. The urine was thick and cloudy, and I could barely get enough to live. I felt a change for the better within a week. The second week I began eating heartily. I began to improve generally, and before seven weeks had passed I was well. I had spent hundreds of dollars for medicine that did not help me, but $6 worth of Doan's Kidney Pills restored me to perfect health."
A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Miss Knight will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-McBun Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers; price, fifty cents per box.

LITTLE POCKET PHYSICIAN.

Hyomei Inhaler That Is Guaranteed by Noyes Drug Store to Cure Catarrh.

Thousands who have been cured by Hyomei call the inhaler that comes with every outfit "The little pocket physician," as it is so small that it can be carried in the pocket or purse.

Prior to the discovery of Hyomei, statistics showed that at least 97 out of every 100 persons in this state were suffering from catarrh in some form. The remarkable results following the use of Hyomei are shown by the smaller percentage to-day of people suffering from catarrh.

There is really no excuse whatever for anyone having catarrh now that Hyomei is so readily obtainable. If you have any doubts about its value, Noyes Drug Store will let you have a complete outfit with the understanding that unless it cures catarrh, it will not cost you a cent.

A complete Hyomei outfit consists of "the little pocket physician," a medicine dropper, and a bottle of Hyomei, and costs only $1, while the additional bottles of Hyomei can be procured for 50 cents, making it the most economical, as well as the most reliable treatment for the cure of catarrh.

Do not delay longer the use of Hyomei if you have catarrh. This is a purely local disease, and Hyomei goes right to the spot where the catarrhal germs are present, destroys them, soothes and heals all inflammation, and makes a permanent and lasting cure.

Unbelievers Being Convinced.

W. G. Rand of Boston was in town last week in the interests of the electric railroad. The unbelievers are beginning to see the error of their words and are willing to admit that it is possible we may have a railroad.

Walker Nason and wife are here from Bingham.

Mrs. Ella Charles is able to ride a short distance.

John Tubbs, wife and daughter visited at B. Nason's, Sunday.

Dr. Young of South Waterford has a fine class in music in this place.

Rev. Mr. Fuller had a serious fall on the ice, returning home from church, Sunday. He was unconscious several minutes.

Rev. G. P. Fuller and family visited the circle at Albany and stopped over night at A. G. Bean's. They reported a fine time.

For some unknown reason there was no circle last week. Several came along distance to attend and were much disappointed.

W. S. Perkins sent a telegram to Los Angeles, Cal., in the morning at 8 o'clock receiving an answer at 4.30 p. m. What would our ancestors have said fifty years ago to have had this happen so far from a railroad?

The Odd Fellows had one of their notable suppers on Wednesday evening. Several other lodges were present. Well, they may enjoy their meeting and eat their midnight supper with enthusiasm, there is a grain of comfort for the ladies in the thought that it would have been a poor supper if they had not cooked it.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the cause of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Charitable Towards All.

Valley Spring and Sisterhood lodges, met Friday afternoon, for the annual installation of officer. The work of installing the officers was performed in a very able and efficient manner. If the members of these and all other lodges exemplify in their everyday lives the grand principles they profess to adopt as their watchword and guide, the work will not be in vain, and the people are bound to be benefited through the aid of their leading star. This should embrace not merely the recognition of brothers and sisters whom they meet from time to time, in their lodges as members, but the broader and more charitable view of recognition of universal brotherhood, wherever found, especially those who are of the household faith, with the great Author of our faith as its master, without which any and all people become narrow and materialistic. May the good work go on.

HARRISON. A Justly Prosperous Business.

Reports coming from different parts of the country give us glowing accounts of the prosperity of last year and extending thus far into this year, and not behind on this prosperous business wave are T. H. Ricker & Sons at their machine works at Harrison. They have had more orders for the past year than they could fill and have made more circular saw mills during the year 1905 than ever since they began the manufacture of these mills.

Recently they received an order by telegram from Indiana for a boiler to be sent by express. However, upon inquiry it was learned that a machine could not be sent by express through New England as the express cars of our eastern states are much too small for carrying heavy machines such as boilers, etc., which will weigh about 1200 pounds, but they have since been informed that there are cars from New York of sufficient size to take these machines to their destination, and they will not leave anything undone in their efforts to have this machinery forwarded from New York by express at the earliest possible moment.

LOCKE'S MILLS. An Alarm of Fire.

On Tuesday night, Feb. 6th, at about 8 o'clock a bit of excitement was caused by the blowing of the mill-whistle announcing a fire. It proved to be around the chimney at the grist mill and was soon extinguished with but little trouble.

The fire was discovered by E. L. Tebbets, the owner of the mill, who was fortunately driving past at the time. Had it been a few minutes later, when the mill help had left work, it would doubtless have been a serious affair.

Portland Pure Lead

It hides the old color or the new wood better than other brands. It is made from the finest materials. The metallic lead is taken and corroded by the Old Dutch Process, which forms the dry, white powder. This is then mixed by special machinery with selected Pure Linseed Oil and ground to a fine texture in special stone mills.

The result is a beautiful, fine, white paste, such as pure materials and perfect methods only can produce. Forty years' experience in lead making have taught us how to make this whitest and greatest covering Lead.

Rev. Mr. Brooks gave a very interesting sermon last Sabbath morning at the M. E. church. He spoke of the Life and Character of Lincoln in a very able manner, and of the great work of the Freedman's Aid and Southern Education society of the South Land, that was organized in 1866, and of the rapid growth of the work in forty years. He speaks of the thousands of the colored people who have been sent out as preachers, teachers, physicians, college presidents, and thousands of other young men and women to bless the world. He said 15,000 had been converted in the schools and yet there were two million or more illiterate mothers among the colored people to-day in the South, and that only education and Christianity will solve the great problem of the many, many colored people of the south land and make them self supporting and good American citizens.

Rev. Mr. Brooks gave a very interesting sermon last Sabbath morning at the M. E. church. He spoke of the Life and Character of Lincoln in a very able manner, and of the great work of the Freedman's Aid and Southern Education society of the South Land, that was organized in 1866, and of the rapid growth of the work in forty years. He speaks of the thousands of the colored people who have been sent out as preachers, teachers, physicians, college presidents, and thousands of other young men and women to bless the world. He said 15,000 had been converted in the schools and yet there were two million or more illiterate mothers among the colored people to-day in the South, and that only education and Christianity will solve the great problem of the many, many colored people of the south land and make them self supporting and good American citizens.

OXFORD.

Mrs. Caroline Bumpus. In the death of Mrs. Caroline Bumpus, which occurred on Feb. 2nd, Oxford lost its oldest woman resident, as she lacked but six days of being nine-one years of age.

Mrs. Bumpus was born in Hebron but had lived in this town fifty-five years. She had been a member of the Congregational church forty-five years. For a long time she has been a widow, having a home with her younger son, Charles H. Bumpus, who, with his wife, have affectionately cared for her during her declining years. A large number of friends and neighbors assembled at the Congregational church in the afternoon of Sunday, Feb. 4th, where appropriate services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. Frederick Newport, he speaking from the words, "He giveth his beloved sleep."

SENATOR TAFT AS CUPID.

worth, who made love during the journey to Miss Alice Roosevelt and is soon to marry her, and the other is Congressman Swager Sherley of Louisville, Ky. One of the ladies invited by Secretary Taft to accompany the party was Miss Mignon Critten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. De Fries Critten of Grymes' Hill, Staten Island, N. Y. The romantic atmosphere of the excursion had its influence upon Representative Sherley and Miss Critten, and their marriage will soon be solemnized.

Secretary Taft is very fond of jokes and often uses playful expressions. Once in the Philippines he cautioned certain officials to be faithful to their trusts. "If you are not, your official heads will be cut off," he added. The Filipinos took the governor's language so literally that he was compelled to explain he had no designs on their lives.

Francis G. Newlands, who succeeded John P. Jones as senator from Nevada, is a man of wealth, polish and courtliness of manner. He is fifty-seven years of age and, as he is a ready debater, is often on his feet in the senatorial chamber. In talking about up to date agricultural methods Mr. Newlands once said:

"In my boyhood in Mississippi I knew a farmer who adopted eagerly every new farming device that came out. I inspected this farmer's chicken house one day and found several rats scampering about in it. 'Look here, Mr. Jones,' I said, 'why don't you clear the rats out of your chicken house?'"

"They don't do no harm," said Mr. Jones. "Don't they eat the eggs?" said I. "Not now," he answered. "They used to, but not now."

"How is it?" I asked, "that they have stopped?"

"I think," he said, "that these here newfangled china nest eggs has sort o' discouraged 'em."

Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks is noted for his height, his stateliness, his frock coat and senatorial dignity. When President Roosevelt was first talked of as a candidate for vice president he deprecated the suggestion and was quoted at the time as saying that if he accepted the office his impulses might some time get the better of him and impel him to throw a cuspidor at some gaudy gentleman who was occupying the floor. One could not imagine Vice President Fairbanks doing a thing like that.

Although the vice president is usually pictured as the embodiment of dignity, he has been fond of country sports ever since the days of his boyhood on his father's farm in Ohio. He was a good student, but a genuine boy, and loved the creeks and ponds near his old home, which afforded him delightful recreation in swimming and diving. Sometimes as he sits in the chair of the president of the senate during a long debate a reminiscent look will come into his face as he thinks of a shady pool where he played hooky more than once for the sake of a cool dip.

One of these stolen joys he recollects well. He and two or three of his schoolmates overstayed their noon hour, enjoying themselves in the cool waters of the creek. When they finally arrived at the schoolhouse the tale came on their hair informed the master where they had been. They were brought out on the schoolhouse floor and got a good flogging.

Senator Gorman of Maryland and Senator Bailey of Texas are two of the most prominent Democrats of the senate. Senator Gorman has been recognized as leader of the minority for some years, but wants to drop it. Senator Bailey has been urged to take the post, but refuses because he has such a temper he is afraid he might not be able to occupy the post with becoming composure on all occasions. He realizes that his temper is his weak point and remembers with mortification the historic occasion when he upset an inkstand on Senator Beveridge. The Texas senator is of striking appearance, has rosy cheeks and curly hair and a general resemblance to an actor. He used to be noted for his eccentricities of costume, but is now more reconciled to conventional modes of dress.

Mr. Bailey was once looking for the residence of a certain lawyer in a town in Arkansas. He did not know the way and asked a colored man he overtook on the road. "The man I want to see is a lawyer," he said to the negro. "Is this Mr. D. down the road a lawyer?"

"He ain't no lawyer that I ever heard tell of," answered the old negro. "You're sure?"

The old negro scratched his head in deep thought; then a gleam of remembrance lighted his eye. "Now I think of it, boss," he said, "pears like I do recollect he ran for lawyer one time."

A New Magazine for You

I am bringing out another new magazine that you will come pretty close to liking. I wouldn't be surprised if it hit you harder than anything in the shape of a magazine you have ever seen. There isn't much style to it, but it has the stuff in it that you and everybody else will want to read. It is called

THE SCRAP BOOK

Something New in Magazine Making

THE SCRAP BOOK is the most elastic thing that ever happened in the way of a magazine—elastic enough to carry anything from a tin whistle to a battleship. Everything that appeals to the human brain and human heart comes within its compass—fiction, which is the backbone of periodical circulation; biography, review, philosophy, science, art, poetry, wit, humor, pathos, satire, the weird, the mystical—everything that can be classified and everything that cannot be classified. A paragraph, a little bit, a saying, an editorial, a joke, a maxim, an epigram.

Nothing Like It in the World

There isn't anything in the world just like THE SCRAP BOOK. It is an idea on which we have been working for several years, and for which we have been gathering materials. We have bought hundreds and hundreds of scrap books from all over the country, some of them a century old, and are still buying them. From these books we are gathering and classifying an enormous number of gems, and facts and figures, and historical and personal bits that are of rare value. Furthermore, we have a corps of people ransacking libraries, reading all the current publications, the leading daily papers, and digging out curious and quaint facts and useful facts and figures from reference book, cyclopedia, etc., etc.

Don't fail to get a copy of this first issue of THE SCRAP BOOK. It sells at the price at which all our other magazines sell—Ten Cents a Copy and One Dollar by the Year.

WHAT HARD WATER DOES.

The hard water used for drinking purposes in many places causes the deposit of calcareous matter in the kidneys and bladder, producing the agonizing and dangerous diseases known as Gravel and Stone. Cold, excessive use of stimulants, and irregular feeding, and other causes also.

Induce Disorders of the Kidneys. Disordered kidneys speedily cause vitiation of the blood and lead to the most distressing and obdurate maladies. The sufferer, who believes his kidneys affected, has not an hour to lose. The most efficacious medicine for which he can have recourse is Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, a preparation that is as sure to bring relief as the sun.

A True Specific for all diseases of the kidneys and bladder as is possible and certainly far better than any other medicine known. It has, in thousands of instances, arrested diabetic tendency and inflammation, and checked the wasting away of the kidneys, restoring them to a healthy action.

It Has Effectuated Wonderful Cures of Gravel and Stone in the bladder. Formerly the only relief was by terribly painful surgical operations, and even they were of questionable value. Now, the removal of these foreign substances from the delicate organs they clog and torture, is done by Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

SKIN TORTURES

Thousands of wretched people are miserable—driven almost mad by the terrible itching and burning sensation of Eczema and other skin diseases; many imagine they are suffering from bad blood, when as a matter of fact the blood has nothing to do with it. These awful tortures are caused by little germs that attack the skin externally, which can be rooted out in a hurry, leaving the skin clear, soft and healthy. Such misery now cleared away as surely as the sun shines above. Not merely attempted, not a matter of improvement merely, but a temporary relief—but a clearing of it all away absolutely and permanently.

THE D. D. D. PRESCRIPTION

a specific formula, put up in sealed bottles with authentic label, has proven to be the only certain cure for these diseases. Its record of cures is astonishing, amazing, almost miraculous. It is a liquid, used externally, non-greasy.

Cleansed within one month.

For a number of years my husband has been suffering with a terrible case of eczema. He had doctor after doctor, but without success. The city, but they could not even stop the itching. I was told by a friend of the D. D. D. treatment and began using it at once. The first few applications eased the itching, and in a month's time his flesh was clear as could be.

story: He had crossed from Key West with a Cuban expedition. They had effected a landing, but had been scattered by the coast guard. His real object, he told General Gonzales, was not to join the insurgents, but to go directly and offer his services to a man whom he knew out of a spirit of revenge, which perhaps a Spanish officer could understand. He had no wish to do anything but fight against a land that would give him no chance of retrieving himself—in fact, like the hero in Everett Hale's story, he was a man without a country.

General Gonzales reflected considerably on this proposition. Trilany's knowledge of Spanish manners—he at one time had been a naval attaché at Madrid—was complete, and so he had been able to reach San Fernandez without any great suspicion being aroused as to his nationality after he had once escaped from the coast guard. He was a man who might serve well, Gonzales reflected, in his force, for despite the assertion of so many Spaniards that Gonzales had a wholesome respect for the mechanical knowledge possessed by American officers. He had just lost by death from yellow fever the man who knew more about the guns of the fortifications of San Fernandez than any one else. The loss had seemed irreparable, and here was a chance, if this man were sincere in his assertion that he had deserted his nationality, of gaining a man who might be equally as valuable as the one he had lost, if not more so. But could he trust this Trilany? Now, the Spanish temper, from my own knowledge of it, about men's motives differs very considerably from the Anglo-Saxon. A Spaniard may be a man with high notions of honor and still believe that the primitive emotions control men to a great extent in love and hate and war, and that revenge is something that will seize a man and hold him until he acts out of it.

This man Trilany was utterly disgraced by his countrymen. He was a man, on the other hand, whom Senior Gonzales had every reason to believe had given up those bad habits which had ruined him. He saw him once, twice, a third time. Trilany was a good deal of a diplomat. His force over the commander of San Fernandez, and he ended by receiving an appointment in the Spanish garrison. From having the appointment to a man of this character, it was not far from having an ascendancy over the officers about him. He knew more than they about guns, and his skill and marksmanship were something that he seemed likely to be able to impart to his advantage.

Now, strange circumstances had brought together and cooped up in that little Cuban seaport the English consul's stepdaughter, Miss Chatwin, a girl of American birth, and this Trilany, who was betraying his country. Senior Gonzales in the limited round of society there had found the English consul's house a most entertaining spot, and the entertainment, you may be-

He ended by receiving an appointment. He, lay much in Miss Chatwin's eyes. He was probably reticent about his affairs, but one day in a spirit of exultation and perhaps to counteract the report that was then current in San Fernandez that Admiral Cervera's fleet had been dispersed by Commodore Schley he told the story of how he believed that many Americans were coming over to Spain. He had one good man, anyway, who wasn't appreciated at home.

"You may know him, Miss Chatwin; a Lieutenant Trilany." She looked at him with a dull horror. "Do you mean that man has given up his country?"

"Of course—most certainly. He is here." She was not very talkative after that. The next morning, close after sunrise, a woman came out of the consul's house and went up the narrow street to the old cathedral and entered and knelt down and then went half hesitatingly and confessed to the priest, although she was not a Romanist, for even self contained women may be carried away by impulse, such being the safeguard given them, and it is sometimes quite as bad as too much self contained as to be too impulsive. Days passed—days of event, days of humor, days when the scurrying feet could be seen from the back hills, days when General Gonzales was exalted and then depressed and when Sir Arthur Groffin felt himself more busy than ever before in any of his other appointments.

One afternoon a servant from the British consulate brought a letter to Lieutenant Trilany.

A Spanish colony in wartime is a queer sort of place in our good Anglo-Saxon sense of "queer." There are these little officers all about, and now and then a big man, but not very often, and then the little soldiers of an earnest gesticulating race are not gesticulating quite so much as the little chaps we see in France. Among these you would see in the wartime at San Fernandez a tall, dark, earnest faced man, very well kept now, though he had come there shabby in mind and health and dress.

When the food supply began to get a bit reduced, as it did, and the townsfolk went around begging of the officials in some way to secure more beef, more oatmeal, more anything, it was this man whose quiet, calm demeanor was of extreme assistance to General Gonzales in quieting a populace that so easily might be turned into a mob. Although for the most they did hate the Yankees when their stomachs were empty, the craving desire for food was more than racial prejudice.

This officer, the renegade American, if you will, had, as has been told, a very keen knowledge of projectiles and no mean information about engineering, for since his dismissal from the United States navy, being a man of means, he devoted himself to the careful study of engineering topics, both in France, where that science is so well advanced, and in Germany. He brought to San Fernandez a mind well equipped and the judgment which made his knowledge extremely useful. So it followed very naturally, he having reached the point of being completely trusted, that he knew every mine, for he had located most of them, as well as every gun of the shore works.

To return to the woman in the case, for one must always return to her sooner or later in every case, Trilany had long been aware of Lady Groffin's and her daughter's presence in San Fernandez. Although he at one time had put them quite out of mind, or supposed he had, he found himself rather troubled about the British consul having his family in so dangerous a spot, and then he remembered that nobody could withstand Lady Groffin's will. Her nature craved excitement and variety, and she doubtless saw that she was laying up many good future dinner stories from the experience to be gathered at San Fernandez.

About this time Trilany had the note, which ran:

"I am writing this not because I care about you at all—and, although I know that once I treated you very badly, it may not appear vain of me to say so—but I am writing it because in those days you certainly were a gentleman—at least you seemed so to me—and I can't understand the degradation, so far beyond the former, to which you have sunk. The only charitable supposition I can have is that you are mad. I don't know why I am writing this, but the whole case seems so fearful that a man who has once been an officer in his country's service should go completely over to her enemy and sell himself out of petty pique, for after all it's petty, and it's only conceit that leads us to exaggerate our personal affairs to so much importance as you have put yours."

"You will understand from this how thoroughly I despise you, and perhaps I have taken the pains to tell you because I do despise you, although, of course, you may not care about my opinion."

Days passed—days of excitement that was not suppressed, days when people paid extraordinary sums to get away and could not get away even with more extraordinary ones, days when every break in the line of the horizon outside of the harbor was watched with apprehension—not only with apprehension, but with fearfulness—and when again there were lines of the blockading fleet or plucky gunboats getting in range of the fire of the ports, when brisk cannonading added to the impressiveness of it all. The British consul, Trilany heard, had sent his wife and stepdaughter back into the country somewhere to a safe place well garrisoned, although he was forced to remain at his post.

A misty morning came, a haze and downpour of the rainy season, when everything is moist, when out of the moisture comes that lassitude that seizes your muscles and nerves and leaves you quivering, the lassitude which perhaps is a warning that the fever has taken you. On such a morning suddenly a line of ships, despite the mines, appeared in the narrow entrance of San Fernandez, and then a downpour of shot and a rise of smoke and a hail of noise fell over that community. The forts replied stubbornly, persistently. General Gonzales was everywhere, for he was a brave man. No man had more physical bravery. Suddenly an officer came flying to him.

"Half the guns are spiked. We can't answer back."

What a rage there was then! What ineffectual anger!

HILLS

PRACTICAL GRADUATE OPTICIAN.

The only optician in this county who has ever personally attended an Optical School and has diploma for same.

Hills is recommended by nearly every first-class Physician in Oxford County, what more do you want?

If your eyes need treatment go to your regular Physician, IT'S SAFER than fooling with Quack Doctors and Fake Opticians.

NORWAY ADVERTISER, 1895, 11 years ago, says:—"Vivian W. Hills, our leading optician has been in Portland the greater part of the past few weeks, taking a post-graduate optician's examination, under the charge of a celebrated New York oculist. This examination, and practice at the Eye and Ear Infirmary must necessarily be a benefit to Mr. Hills in his examination of the eye. Mr. Hills took his first course ten years ago in Chicago and ever since has been in advance of all others. He also was the first in Oxford County to make a specialty of fitting the eye for all errors."

Hills' prices are the lowest. Why pay $5.00, $4.00 or $3.50 when you can get the very same at Hills for $2.50. Why pay $2.50, $2.00, when you can get the same at Hills for $1.00?

Don't understand us saying we are the only one who can fit you—some "traveling men," "spectacle dealers," "would be opticians" and "quack doctors" will fit you so you can see, but you will pay double the price that HILLS would ask you for the same. How do you know but a pair fitted by HILLS would be less strain on the eye? Try it, for why take chances? Don't fool with your eyes.

Anyone can sell Glasses, WE FIT THEM.

Exa Davis was driving a four ox team along the road, when the sleds, which were loaded with hay, broke through the snow and Mr. Davis started for the landing with a load of logs. When about one fourth of a mile from his choppers he slipped and fell in front of the sleds and it is thought his head struck and crushed him. He was dragged 12 rods in front of the forward runners and when found his clothes were drawn under the runners and his front ribs were broken. He was just alive but unconscious, and expired soon after he was found by his men, who tried to ascertain why he did not return.

His funeral was at his residence the 9th, and in spite of the severe snowstorm his friends and neighbors came to pay their last respects to him, and we all felt that one of God's noblemen had been taken from our midst.

Mr. Davis was 69 years of age and had always been an honest, hard working man and a useful townsman, and we shall sadly miss his loss.
